

From Mind over Matter

Think about it, what critical element culturally sets humans apart from other species? The critical element that culturally sets humans apart from other species is the functional superiority of the human brain.

The existing human culture has four axial components, namely politics, the anatomy of business transactions, religion, and technologies, which influence the affairs of mankind, must be obvious to all with a passing interest in human behavior.

The abundance of neurons with short axons, and the more advanced connective process within the human brain, set it apart from other species. Human culture is a product of the creativity and intellect which the functional superiority of the human brain allows.

The human capacity for learning and transmitting knowledge to succeeding generations exists within a culture that consists of languages, ideas, beliefs, business transactions, customs, taboos, codes, institutions, tools, techniques, works of art, rituals, ceremonies, and symbols which reflect diversity in the sophisticated problem-solving ability of the human brain.

In the context of human culture, environments are adapted to the purposes of mankind rather than solely depended upon as determining forces. Cultural change takes place as a result of revolutionary movements and human factors in the "political-business-religious-technology continuum".

The political activities of humans are an attempt to solve problems of how people are to be managed and organized for the good or for the bad.

The religious activities of humans are an attempt to solve problems of how people are to be conscious and aware of both Creation and Creator for the good or for the bad.

The technological activities of humans are an attempt to solve problems of how people are to use resources for the good or for the bad.

The autonomous of "business" relates to the state of being busy either as an individual or society as a whole, doing commercially viable and profitable transactions for the good or for the bad.

Other species do not have the brain function that is available to members of the human race in its pursuit of answers to problems relating to its existence, and it is this critical element which culturally sets them apart.

Point being, my fellow human beings, no matter who you are -- what your status -- where you're from or at and when period of time that you're living soul existed in -- The remaining existence of your heart will continue to remain the same way -- as it was chosen to live by -- for eternity . Everything that was thought owned will be realized loaned through the limitation of time. This is a fact that cannot be changed from the evolution of man that supersedes the personal choices -- from mind over matter.

© Author

Don L. Johnson

